A beautiful day! Until about the midpoint, in Port Colborne. Around then it started to drizzle, and it didn't stop until the end. Another Port Colborne disappointment is that where I went, there was a big industrial mill blocking access to Lake Erie. Yet actually, even the drizzly part was fun.

Winter is coming! I got used to check for the daily highs to see how much sweat there will be. But I failed to check for the daily lows. Today started near freezing, and I had no gloves... So my fingers were in real pain on the first few kilometer. After about St. Thomas I thawed, and the ride became a very easy one (and pretty enough).
